THE SENIOR CLASS

REIDSVILLE HIGH SCHOOL

REIDSVILLE, NORTH CAROLINA

Foreword

Throughout the pages of this Renocahi the staff has sought to show you the creditable contribution which has been yours toward the winning of a great victory and an everlasting peace. From work and worry, triumph and disappointment, love and laughter, we have garnered some "footprints on the sands of time" which we hope will bring back many happy recollections that cluster about our high school life.

Dedication

WITH the love, admiration, and respect that has grown more abundant, more abiding, through our years in high school and with heartfelt appreciation for her friendly interest, inspiring guidance, and untiring service; we, the seniors of 1943, dedicate this, our issue of the RENOCAHI, to . . .

History of Class of '43

One decade and two years ago we Seniors brought forth to this continent, a new class, conceived in unity, and dedicated to a process of seeking and attaining high ideals in life.

Now as we are engaged in the conclusion of our experiences in Reidsville High School, we recall with fond recollection, that day in September, in the fall of 1931, when each of us entered the first grade. The class of today was divided then among the first grades of Lawsonville Avenue school and Franklin Street school. Anxiously we worked during the first year of our new life, finally to be rewarded with a promotion to the second grade. Then came the third grade, with new subjects, plays, and many happy days, Rapidly, our years in grammar school passed. The fourth grade found us in the midst of renovation of our schools. Many of the classes were divided for some time, and then finally two new grammar schools were completed, North End and South End. Lawsonville Avenue school was remodeled, and a new building replaced the old school on Franklin Street. We entered the fifth year of grammar school in new buildings of which we were very proud. Again, our class was divided because of new school districts set up in our city.

During the years, many newcomers had become a part of the "crowd." We had also lost many who moved away. Hard work and good times made up our sixth year, and then came our final year in grammar school. Here we were reunited into one large class of seventh graders. There were many changes in the regular routine which we had followed during previous years. We found ourselves confronting four teachers instead of only one. New subjects were introduced, and we witnessed many new experiences—play productions, a basketball team, and at last, preparation for graduation from graded school. June, 1938, found our class graduates of grammar school. Valedictorian for the class was Geneva Gibson, and salutatorian was Dorothy Fagge. As graduates of '38 we had completed the first step towards our goal.

It was in the fall of 1938 that we as green, green freshmen entered into the tall, wide halls of Reidsville High School. Everyone knew we were freshmen merely by watching us as we walked proudly down the halls of R. H. S. with our heads held high. However, we soon got into the swing of curricular activities, and became acquainted with many new faces.

Quite in contrast to our first year as the bewildered freshmen was our second year at R. H. S. Now as the cocky know-it-alls, we had risen to the lofty heights of sophomores, and we were slowly being absorbed into the far-reaching meshes of extra-curricular activities, During our sophomore year, one member of our class, Jesse Moore, won statewide prominence in debating.

As Juniors, our interests widened and we came to be a more important part of the school. We found ourselves gaining recognition in all the fields of high school activities—athletics, clubs, debating, dramatics, band, and student government. We were well represented in the student organization of R. H. S. Nancy Saunders served as vice-president, Dandridge Price as secretary, and Floyd Seay as treasurer of the organization. During our junior year, our nation declared war. All of us made great sacrifices in an all-out war effort. A course in physical education was added to the curriculum of the school as an aid to physical fitness. We all realized a great many changes taking place due to a warring world. But as a glorious ending for our junior year, we entered whole-heartedly into the Junior-Senior Bar-b-cue and Square Dance, an event quite different from previous events.

Finally as dignified Seniors, we solemnly entered into our last year at dear old R. H. S. With our hearts and minds in our work and in our play, we added anew to our past scholastic and athletic records. Many members of our class were outstanding in sports, others in debating and dramatics. It was in our senior year at Reidsville High School that Jesse Moore was elected president of our student organization. Many were members of the council and assembly and greatly aided the school with their work.

With a mixture of both happiness and sorrow in our hearts, we are prepared to depart from this school, Reidsville High School. Never, in the remaining years, will we forget our carefree days here, and we depart saying, "With the knowledge which we have acquired through days of hard work and disappointments, joys and sorrows, we will endeavor to say and work toward that goal of years gone by, 'that government of the people, by the people, and for the people, shall not perish from the earth'."

DOROTHY FAGGE, Historian.

Statistics.

Once again another milestone in the history of Reidsville High School has presented itself and another group of sons and daughters will be emitted into the rough and stormy planet known as the world. Since this group of an even 100 must be courageous and prepared for anything, let's combine the class and call it "Mr. Typical American"; it is, indeed, a typical example of future citizens and soldiers.

"Mr. Typical American" is a cheerful fellow who likes to keep his physical form in trim and endeavors at all times to have a good time, with Leon Moore leading the way. Over sixty of "Mr. Typical American's" brain cells are made up of some very pretty girls, while more than thirty of his brain cells are composed of some very handsome boys-Bill Fagge and "Pup" Somers for instance. He likes to go to school and strives at all times to make something out of himself. Although he finds joy in worrying his teachers and making their hair grow gray, he has to admit that he likes them all. His favorite teacher is Miss Annie Wootton, to whom he has dedicated his annual.

"Mr. Typical American" would be quite an advantage to the American Army because of his tank-like weight-11,892 pounds, with his girl cells averaging 118.9 pounds each and the boys 153 pounds each. He thrives on all the vitamins to maintain a total waist line of 206 feet, which is just about as far as a football travels when "Hamp" Duncan sticks a strong toe into it. He never likes to be late for school, although he sometimes is, because some of his brain cells didn't get enough sleep the night before.

Since "Mr. Typical American" is trying to learn all the curricula offered by the eighteen teachers of R. H. S., he attends all the classes in a fast pace. The girls' favorite subjects are shorthand and typing; second choice, home economics. The boys prefer mathematics and science with frogs, chemicals, and devasting formulas.

If he ever finishes school "Mr. Typical American's" girls think that he ought to attend the University of North Carolina, with the boys ready to argue at a minute's notice for Duke. But there probably won't be much argument since the girls' second choice is Duke and the boys' second choice is the University of North Carolina. (The outcome will depend largely on who wins a certain football game, come November.)

"Mr. Typical American" has other interests besides school and studies. He is at the height of delight when Saturday rolls around and a game of football, his favorite sport, will be in progress. This isn't hard to realize when you remember that his buddies have won two state championships for him during the past four years. But when the football season is over "Mr. Typical American" will surely be sick because the boys won't like it when he goes to the girls' second favorite game of basketball, and the girls will disagree when he goes to the boys' second favorite game of baseball. But in the end all will be fine since any sport is a joyous pastime for the students of Reidsville High School, because nearly all of them take part in some athletic program.

After a busy day "Mr. Typical American" usually stops by his favorite refreshment counter before going home and has a glass of his favorite drink. Coca-Cola, along with a bite of his favorite candy bar, Mounds. His boys brain cells also go in for a large portion of a big-big bottle of Pepsi-Cola or Royal Crown. He also keeps his health up to par with numerous chocolate milkshakes. In addition to "Mounds," "Mr. Typical American," led by that great candy eater, Richard Moore, goes in for his share of Heath Bars, Clark Bars, Hersheys, Baby

Ruths, and Milky Ways. He really does have a "sweet tooth."

After supper, if "Mr. Typical American" doesn't have any lessons to get, he goes to one of those 153 shows he has to attend every week. Most of the time he has to walk to his girl's home and then to the show, but he is always dreaming about the day when he can roll out his favorite car, the Ford, and truck off to his destination in no time at all. He would also like to be the proud owner of a shiny Chevrolet or a Buick.

Now for two short hours "Mr. Typical American" is ready to feast his eyes on his favorite movie actor, John Payne, and his favorite actress, Ann Sheridan. But he is always ready to settle for Rita Hayworth, Paulette Goddard, Betty Grable, or that actor of actors, Clark Gable.

After "Mr. Typical American" has spent part of that $45.00 a week that he spends on shows he is ready to go home and get a good night's sleep dreaming of romantic isles and daring adventures when he should be dreaming of the next day's exam.

On the nights that "Mr. Typical American" doesn't have a date for a show he stays home and listens to the radio while he studies his lessons. He always tries to tune in his favorite dance orchestra of Harry James or his second choice of Glen Miller. He can also be put to dance orchestra of Harry James of his second choice of Cherling Main reason for sleep by the music of Charlie Spivak, Kay Kyser, or Guy Lombardo. His main reason for the his favorite orchestra is to hear his favorite song. "White Christmas." He is also listening to his favorite orchestra is to hear his favorite song. "White Christmas." He is also "contented" when his second choices, "Dearly Beloved" and "My Devotion," are played in his favorite rhythm. All the teachers, especially Mr. Holmes and Mr. Lipscomb, can verify the fact that most of the seniors have a "Dearly Beloved" or a "My Devotion."

But summing it all up, we must admit that the 1943 graduating class of Reidsville High School is a cross section of a typical American—altogether a very fine specimen of young manhood and womanhood that looks forward to a bright and prosperous future.

HAROLD P. STEPHENSON, Statistician.

Last Will and Jestament

We, the class of 1943, in order to form a more perfect school, establish reputation, insure the classes following us, provide for the Juniors, promote the general welfare of Reidsville High School, and secure the blessings of safety to ourselves and our posterity, do ordain and establish this our Last Will and Testament.

ARTICLE I

To the world, now stricken with pain and suffering, we leave the hope for a swift victory, everlasting peace, and freedom for all mankind.

ARTICLE II

We will to Reidsville High School our bright ideas, many abilities, and our pledge to its high standards,

ARTICLE III

To Mr. Perry, we leave our most sincere appreciation for the many things he has done for us, and the problems he has helped us solve during the past five years.

ARTICLE IV

To Mr. Lipscomb, our principal, we leave our sincere thanks and appreciation for making these five years ones that will be remembered with pleasure.

ARTICLE V

Section 1. To Miss Ratledge, we leave a cyclorama.

SEC. 2. To Miss Conley, we leave a new string of beads to play with when she becomes so agitated.

Sec. 3. To Mr. Holmes, we leave protection against that certain person that trails him at all the debating conferences.

The Ratification of the Conventions of three Classes shall be sufficient for the Establishment of this Last Will and Testament between the Classes so ratifying the Same.

Done in Convention by the Unanimous Consent of the Classes present the twenty-eighth Day of May in the Year of our Lord one thousand nine hundred and forty-three. In Witness whereof We have hereunto subscribed our Names.

MARTHA BOATWRIGHT, Testatrix.

Joast to Class of '43

Let's lift the cup, then, to our high school days; To light-hearted girlhood and boyhood ways; To heartbreak, to joy, to laughter, to tears, Each minute a memory to carry through the years. To teachers, whose friendships have been inspiring. Who have accepted our errors with patience untiring. To the comfort and love that only parents can give—These things we shall keep as long as we live.

Let's lift the cup, then, though not in arrogant boast, Let's lift the cup and let this be our toast: Here's to twelve years, happy and carefree. Here's to a golden future to you, class of '43.

Out of This Whirl

Prophecy

As I gaze up at the United States flag rippling in the breeze, a familiar group of words, spoken by familiar voices, sounds in my ear, "We pledge allegiance to the flag of the United States of America, and to the Republic for which it stands, one nation, indivisible, with liberty and justice for all." The pledge rings true for the members of the class of '43 as they again repeat these words together after a lapse of ten years. And it seems as I look at the flag, the stars and stripes become a motion picture on which are portrayed the recent biographies of the class of 1943.

Garland Chrismon is slowly getting rich by transporting the nurses Mary Frances Jones, Mabel Forbes, Margaret McCollum, Elizabeth Faircloth, and India McCollum from Memorial Hospital to Hopkins Airport to see their boy friend pilots Henry Wall, Billy Dallas, and Ralph Phipps. Speaking of flying there's a terrible confusion going on above. Melvin Stanfield, a flying instructor for the Eastern Airlines, taught one of his pupils how to make a take-off but he completely forgot to tell him how to come down again. Geneva Underwood and Helen Cross, air hostesses, who went along just for the ride are screaming to the tops of their voices. What a situation!

Two stars glittering in the lower right hand corner of Old Glory are Nancy Saunders and Martha Boatwright, stars of Bill Fagge's newest production "What We Didn't Know." Former WAAC lieutenants, Margaret Robertson and Dorothy Saunders, are his efficient secretaries.

A radio has been turned on, and the voice of Jesse Moore, that noted radio commentator, greets us. The station is not clear. Another program has the air. Woman radio announcer, Evelyn Dixon, has iust introduced the program of Richard Woffard and Margaret Hinson, those famous comediennes. Bob Jones' o'chestra furnishes the music for this program, and according to the sighs of the audience, it's right out of heaven. Nellie Carter, Muriel Norman, and Sallie Gilliam are their stenographers. Leonard Stadler and Harold Cross now have their own radio program called "Music Makers." As their treasurer, Thomas Stadler, is still on the receiving end of things.

Talk, talk, talk! Richard Moore always did like to talk, and he's doing it in the courts of New York. He is one of the best lawyers in that state. Serious listeners of Richard's are Harold Stephenson and Floyd Seay, successful mechanical engineers. Beside them is Jack Perry, a prominent chemical engineer.

I smell smoke! It's coming from those two dollar cigars of business man, Billy Mobley. His three secretaries are Peggy Ware. Helen Mitchell, and Hazel Cooke. At the moment, they seem to be busy talking to John Groff and Bobby Somers, men of leisure.

A city editor! That's Leon Moore, who owns and operates a newspaper in Chicago. Dorothy Shankle and Geneva Gibson are two of his correspondents.

A name in lights—it is Helen Pritchett's, the prima donna of New York. Sallie Price acts as her business manager, and Billie Grey Neal writes her songs.

A group of chattering stenographers are crowding around a man. They are Gwendolyn Whicker, Elaine Benson, Nancy VanHook, and Barbara Grace Jeffreys. Who's the man? It is Jamie Massey, the owner of a large factory in Chicago. In the group also are four housewives, Dorothy Bradner, Rachael DeLancey, Blanche Smith, and Margaret Cobb, who are discussing the problems of a budget.

Another warehouse in Reidsville! It is Jack Crutchfield's. His best auctioneers are Haywood Shumate and Jimmie Duncan.

Bill Claybrook and Robert Gentry have gone professional—Bill, as a professional basketball player, and Robert, as a baseball player. Tonight Robert is giving a star performance, and I recognize many of his old classmates in the grandstand. Edith Brande, Maggie Walker, and Opal Apple, bookkeepers for the J. B. Martin Shoe Factory, are being highly entertained by the childish pranks of Frank Evans and Reuben Ware, successful business men. Norma Mitchell, who is not at all interested in the baseball game, is telling Katie VanHook and Doris McKinney that a girl can't remain in single blessedness all her life, no matter how blessed. Umpire for tonight's game, Julian Gilliam, is nearby being murdered by Raymond Rivers and Billy Mitchell, who whole-heartedly disagree with Julian's decision on the last play. Back in the grandstand, Nancy Hill and Elizabeth Carter, salesladies in Helen Bodenheimer's dress shop, ducked just in time to dodge a handful of peanuts thrown by Ashby Sigmon. Sitting on the front row of the grandstand is Frances Waynick, engrossed in an argument with Stella McKinney and Helen Manley, housewives, as to which is the best looking player in tonight's game, Numa Baker or Donald McAlister. Just behind Frances, Bobby DeLapp, owner of a cigar factory, is asking for quiet.

The sign of A. and P. looms into view. Its manager is Herbert Jones, with John Hooper as one of his employees. Next door to Herbert's grocery store, Carolina Wray, that poised hostess at numerous stag parties these days is having her hair coiffured in Anne Stokes' beauty parlor. Chattering in the next booth is Frances Smothers, who is famous for her attractive hairdo's. Mildred Billingsley is Anne's assistant and Bonnie Walker acts as bookkeeper.

Connie Scoggins, a Power's model, has just been promised a newly furnished apartment as a birthday present, and of course LaVerne Moore, prominent interior decorator, will do the furnishings for her.

As a pastor in his own church, George Goolsby is what he always wanted to be, a preacher. Dandridge Price is a director of Religious Education here.

Since they wanted to pass along the education they received in R. H. S., Genevieve McCollum, Marjorie Trent, Elizabeth Cook, and Dorothy Fagge have become teachers.

The scene is changing, and I find we have some oddities in the class of '43. The only woman prison warden in eight states is Jeanne Throckmorton. Fortunately, she hasn't had any of her old classmates behind bars yet. Bobby Phipps is an aeronautical engineer. Mary Blair Gardner is the Welfare Director of an orphanage. Willie Stanley and Sybil Wray are aviatresses.

The moving picture is over. The class of 1943 has had a full ten years. Each and everyone of them has been to parts unknown, but there are other ten years to come. That flag we pledged allegiance to only a little while ago holds another future still. Perhaps after ten more years we may meet again to view the progress we have made. It is certain we cannot foretell it now. Those stars and stripes hold our fate of the coming years.

GENEVA GIBSON, Prophetess.
